Eire Ready To Aid New World Order

—MR. DE VALERA

MR. DE VALERA stated in the Dail last night that Eire was prepared to take her full share in any international organisation set up to maintain peace and international security.

In the debate on the estimate for the Department of External Affairs, Mr. J. M. Dillon (Independent) strongly criticised the country's attitude in the war, and declared: "I want the United Nations to win." During his speech Mr. W. A. Sheldon (Independent Farmers) crossed the floor of the Dail and sat beside Mr. Dillon. At the same time Mr. M. Donnellan, Leader of the Farmers' Party, walked out of the House in protest.

"Sacrifices Needed"

Mr. DE VALERA said it was their duty to take every step to prepare for the maintenance of peace and security in the post-war period.

"We are keeping as close a watch as we can on international developments in the hope of being able to take our part in any post-war international organisation that may be set up to secure the maintenance of peace," he went on. "The wishes of our nation in that matter are clearly shown by our actions in the past. We were ready to join any international organisation that aimed at collective security and the maintenance of peace on the basis of equality and right between nations large and small.

"We were aware of the besetting difficulties of the League of Nations long before the present war broke out, and it remains to be seen whether there will be any solution of them in the future, or whether the various nations and peoples are prepared to make sacrifices that are absolutely necessary.

"Before this war," Mr. de Valera concluded, "nations were not prepared to make these sacrifices, wanting results without being ready to make them. The world cannot have it that way. If we want peace, the sacrifices that peace requires will have to be made."

LABOUR VIEW

Mr. J. LARKIN junior (Lab.) said that in the future external affairs might mean more to Eire than internal affairs. The price of neutrality might be higher than that of war. Ireland's friends might not be as numerous as before the war. At a time when all the country's resources should be used to state its case before the world, the Minister responsible for broadcasting was expressing the narrow view that people were "sick of propaganda."

Other small nations were making contributions which would entitle them to sit in the "post-war council chamber."

Mr. Larkin suggested that Eire could no longer afford the luck of a representative in Soviet Russia. Insularity and intolerance were as much a crime on our side as on the side of the countries condemned.

Mr. DILLON said he did not think the country should have diplomatic relations with the Soviet, or that it should join those who "ran with the hare and hunted with the hounds." He believed that in Germany and Russia no man was free "to render to Cæsar the things that were Cæsar's and to God the things that were God's."

Nobody could stand aside while religion was persecuted.

"I rejoice in the approaching destruction of Nazi Germany," he said, "and I pray for the destruction of Marxist materialistic Communism in Russia, and in every other State which has contacted it.

"The United Nations are winning this war without our help. I have not hesitated to say that we should have helped them, because I conceived that it was in that way our duty lay.

"I believe it was our duty to render them the same assistance that Portugal has seen fit to give. Our people took a different view."

Mr. DILLON said he dissented from that decision, which he believed wrong. "I think that for all time it will be held against us as a mistake."

He protested against the implication that the Irish people saw no distinction between the United States and Nazi Germany. The bulk of the people recognised in the United States a community which they were proud to claim as friends, a people on whom they were never ashamed to lean in the past.

"PREJUDICE"

"Deputies might say that political expediency prevented me from mentioning Great Britain. I want to see Britain and the Commonwealth of Nations win the war. I realise that there are old prejudices in the country which might be used to confuse people's minds, if exploited by unscrupulous persons at this stage of our history, and to make people foolishly desire that any country should win this war as long as it is not Britain."

Asked by Mr. DAVIN (Lab.) if he wanted Russia to win, Mr. DILLON said: "Russia came to the aid of the United Nations and smashed the German Army. God works with strange instruments, and but for the fact that Russia smashed the German Armies we might have had those armies in the country."

Mr. DILLON said that when Mr. de Valera was leaving America 25 years ago he expressed the gratitude of the Irish people to the people of the United States, and said that if ever the occasion arose the Americans would turn to Ireland for help. That was the next best thing to a treaty.

On being ruled out of order, Mr. DILLON continued:—"Parachutists were dropped here. Persons were sent here, on their own admission, by the German Army to carry on sabotage work and drop bombs on our territory, landed on our shores.

PROTESTS

"Although the Nazis sank our ships and machine-gunned our seamen we contented ourselves with minor diplomatic protests. When they came in great force on two occasions to blitz Belfast we were content with expressing our sympathy and protesting, the assumption being that, preferable to making ourselves belligerent, we had no reason to complain when the Germans came and bombed us.

"The United States, in the course of the war, landed troops in Northern Ireland. So far as international usage goes — whatever we may choose to affirm — the separation of Northern Ireland from Ireland is internationally recognised. The landing of the troops was made the occasion of a vigorous and strong protest, not through diplomatic channels, but addressed to the President and the world by the Taoiseach. He did not complain so bitterly on the occasions when the Axis attacked the country and bombed the city."

Mr. DE VALERA—Protests were made.

Mr. DILLON—Through diplomatic channels—in fact, only after considerable effort. When troops were landed in Northern Ireland a manifesto was issued.

Mr. DE VALERA—Nobody minds the deputy expressing his views, but when he goes out of his way to damage the country it is hard to understand it.

Mr. DILLON—That is the kind of mischievous statement the Taoiseach makes about anyone unfortunate enough to differ with him.

Some deputies interrupted Mr. Dillon to say—"You speak for yourself here," but, continuing, he spoke of Portugal's recent decision to assist Britain to combat U-boats. He commented:—"Portugal will be remembered for it, and will be entitled to say after the war that she knew where her sympathies lay and was not afraid to tell the world."

"A false picture is presented to the mass of the American people, a picture saying that we do not care what becomes of them. The mass of the people want America to know, and it should be got across to them by every possible means, that we are friendly to them, that our hearts are deeply engaged with their cause.

"When the armistice comes, it will be too late to say we were with them."

Mr. DE VALERA—Why does the deputy try to give a one-sided, disparaging statement of the situation as regards this country?

Mr. DILLON—I am trying to present the situation as it appears to others outside this country.

Mr. DE VALERA—As it appears to you.

Mr. DILLON said that his sole purpose in remaining in public life now was to prevent the development of strained relations between Ireland and America. He had always advocated close relations with the Commonwealth of Nations and America.

"ESTRANGEMENT"

He thought the consequences of Mr. de Valera's policy in that regard would prove disastrous. They would result in estrangement. There was still time to take measures to soften the asperity which existed.

"When America came into the war," said Mr. DILLON, "the Taoiseach said in O'Connell street that our attitude would be one of friendly neutrality, but there was no use in saying you were going to be a friendly neutral if on the following morning you took good care to be photographed with the American Minister on your right arm and the German Minister on your left."

At this stage, Mr. M. DONNELLAN (C. na T.) asked "whether this would appear in the official notes," and walked out of the House. Mr. W. A. Sheldon thereupon left the Farmers' benches, and, crossing the floor, took a seat beside Mr. Dillon.

Mr. DILLON admitted that at one stage he criticised the neutrality position. He wanted the country to share the perils of the United Nations in the event of Germany declaring war on the country. Having refused to do that when the peril was present, it would be inconsistent for them now to depart from that neutrality when 95 per cent. of the peril had passed.

T.D.—"WHY I CROSSED THE FLOOR"

OUR Political Correspondent writes:—I asked Mr. Sheldon last night whether his action in "crossing the floor" was to be interpreted in its usual parliamentary meaning as leaving his party.

"I am not a member of any party," Mr. Sheldon replied. "I am an Independent Farmer, and, although I usually sit with the Farmers' representatives, I am not a member of the Clann na Talmhan. My action in crossing the floor was to offset Mr. Donnellan's demonstration of disapproval and a mark of my own approval of Mr. Dillon's sentiments."

Mr. Sheldon further added that on all matters of farming interest he was still at one with the Farmers' body, and would continue to occupy his place with the party unless requested to leave.

Mr. Donnellan declined to make any statement as to his action in leaving the House. Asked to comment on the incident, he said: "There will be plenty of time for that." Told about Mr. Sheldon's statement, Mr. Donnellan replied: "I will deal with that as leader of the party when the time comes."

Tank Battles in Snow West of Kiev

SNOW has fallen in the Western Ukraine, and the plains of the Kiev battlefields are white; but this has not slowed down General Vatutin's offensive, which has carried the Red Army into Zhitomir Province, in the north-west, and as far as the outskirts of Byelaya Tserkov, in the south, Reuter's Special Correspondent cables.

The Russians are thoroughly prepared to enter winter warfare, he states. Special ski troops are ready at key points, with their white camouflage cloaks issued. The average temperature in the southern sector to-day is from four to five degrees below freezing point.

Snow is also reported in the Northern and in some of the central areas. The ground is frozen hard.

Two of General Vatutin's four main columns have 30 miles or less to go to their objectives, this correspondent states. Driving on Korosten, they are over and beyond the Teterev River, first river line beyond Kiev, which the Germans were forced to abandon after a very short struggle. Further south they have crossed the Teterev, taken Radomysl and Brusilov, and entered Zhitomir Province, and are now on the last 28-mile lap to Zhitomir itself.

The third Russian thrust along the railway from Fastov is moving below Berdichev in the direction of Kazatin, junction of main line railways to Poland and Bessarabia.

The fourth thrust due south of Kiev has taken the Russians 50 miles to the outskirts of Byelaya Tserkov, at the same time linking up with the Russian forces in the original Pereyaslav bridgehead. This joint operation has established one continuous 60 miles front, some 20 to 50 miles deep, along the right bank of the Dnieper south and south-east of Kiev.

A big encirclement manœuvre by a hard and successful drive south of Kiev is the thing the Germans fear most at this stage. Up to 200,000 German troops are estimated to be held inside the Dnieper Bend or behind the Cherkassy-Znamenka line, and their dilemma is becoming acute, he says.

According to the Scandinavian Telegram Bureau, "the hard Panzer battles in the Kiev and Southern sectors are assuming greater proportions. Both sides are casting in their reserves of tanks and heavy artillery."

KERCH GAINS

In tempestuous winds, driving rain and heavy seas a hard sea battle is going on in the Kerch Straits. On land, the Russians now have a firm grip on the Kerch Peninsula, and yesterday they gained more ground in face of many tank counter-attacks, Reuter states.

Captain Sertorius, the Berlin Commentator, said that in the Nevel area and along the motor road, Minsk-Smolensk, grim defensive battles continue.

The Soviet communiqué, after reporting the capture of Radmoyal (30 miles N.E. of Zhitonir) and Brusilov (50 miles west of Kiev), stated that more than 100 places were taken by troops of the first Ukrainian front, including Tetrev and Chemyavka; that the bridgeheads south of Rechitsa and in the Kerch Peninsula were extended and strong points taken, while more places were captured west and N.W. of Nevel.

Successes Achieved by Research Bureau

Scientific investigation in Eire during the last three years has led to the successful production of high quality pharmaceutical glycerine, a substitute wool oil, yeast from native materials, fatty acids for the manufacture of polishes, insecticide from offal tobacco, agar, digitalis from Irish-grown plants, and zinc reclamation from disused dry batteries.

The Emergency Scientific Research Bureau, on which £32,850 is being spent this year, has had an encouraging measure of success so far. One of its earliest problems—the production of turf charcoal for use in producer gas plants—has reached the stage where the retort plant at Tarraun is producing about 14 tons per week of high-grade charcoal. It has also evolved a new technique for large-scale production of charcoal from turf in pits and kiln. Its work on substitute fuels for use in gas works has led to the Dublin Gas Company adopting its suggestions for modifications in their water gas plant.

The Bureau also has produced, on a medium scale, lead oxide for use in batteries, and has had separators of Irish timber made by a commercial firm.

Formalin is being produced by Irish Alcohol Factories, Ltd., with plant designed by the Bureau, and arrangements have been made for the manufacture of aluminium sulphate for paper manufacture. A survey of marine algae has been taken over by the Industrial Research Council, and a commercial firm is now in a position to manufacture agar of high quality.

FERTILISERS

The main work now being done by the Bureau relates to the fuel problem. An improved fertiliser from the Clare phosphates is undergoing test, and encouraging results have been secured in experiments on the use of Avoca pyrites for the manufacture of sulphuric acid, while the possibility of commercial production of plates and oxide for battery manufacture are being explored. An amplifier for increasing the power of short-wave broadcasts has been designed, constructed and installed at Athlone, with testing made on a limited scale.

When an estimate in respect of the work of the Bureau during the coming year was discussed in the Dail yesterday, several Deputies joined in the opinion that the Bureau should be given permanent status, and that the State contribution to its maintenance was money well spent. Apart from general commendation for the undertaking, Mr. Cosgrave (F.G.) expressed anxiety about the depredations of rats and the need for a supply of poison to deal with them.

Mr. J. M. Dillon (Ind.) contended that turf, while excellent as a domestic fuel for those living beside bogs and adjacent industries, was "cod" as far as all other purposes were concerned. A suggestion was made by Sir John Esmonde that the Bureau should devote time to plant life, which, treated chemically, should form the basis of raw materials.

Reminding the House that the Bureau had been set up to deal only with emergency problems, Mr. de Valera pointed out that the Industrial Research Council had a long-term policy, and said that it was the intention to have in the future a research body which would be at work reviewing the economic possibilities here.

LEBANESE CABINET ARRESTED

THE President, Premier and Cabinet and 48 members of the Lebanese Parliament have been arrested, and martial law and curfew have been proclaimed in the Lebanon Republic by the French authorities.

The freely-elected Chamber of Deputies has been dissolved, and a temporary Government, with Emile Edde as new Prime Minister, has been established.

French troops fired on demonstrators in the streets of Beirut yesterday following serious disturbances there and at Tripoli, in Northern Lebanon.

Lebanese police refused to obey orders, and the French then called on their own Senegalese troops to deal with the demonstrators, according to Lebanese quarters in Cairo.

FRENCH WARNING

The arrests of the Premier and his Ministers followed the Lebanese Parliament's adoption on Monday of a measure modifying the Constitution, which it held to be incompatible with full sovereignty.

The measure was opposed by the French National Committee on the ground that alteration of the Constitution must await the formal termination of the League Mandate. The French Committee had warned the Lebanese Government that it could not recognise unilateral revision.

Senegalese troops broke into the houses of the Lebanese President and Premier at 4 a.m. yesterday. Although the Premier and his household are Moslems, consequently regarding premises occupied by women as sacrosanct, the troops broke into his wife's bedroom to drag the Prime Minister out.

BRITISH PROTEST

Sir Edward Spears, British Minister to the Lebanon and Syria, has sent a protest in the name of the British Government, "as guarantors of Lebanese independence," to the French National Committee Representative in the Levant at the French action.

The Egyptian Premier has also cabled a warning to General de Gaulle that Egypt might revise its attitude towards the French National Committee if the situation was not restored to normal.

Sovereign independence for the Lebanon and Syria was proclaimed by the French in 1941, but the French mandate remained in force, and the country is garrisoned by French and British troops.

Mr. Cordell Hull had a two-hour conference with President Roosevelt at the White House yesterday. It was their first talk since Mr. Hull's return from Moscow.

The discussion, it is believed, included the forthcoming meeting between Mr. Churchill, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin.—(Reuter.)

Minister Gives Reasons For Ban on Annual

THE Controller of Censorship was under fire again in the Dail yesterday, when the reasons for the prohibition of the publication of the "Wolfe Tone Annual, 1944," published by Brian O'Higgins, were sought by Mr. J. Larkin, jun. (Lab.).

Mr. FRANK AIKEN, Minister fo the Co-ordination of Defensive Measures, asserted that the Annual "attempted to destroy the unity which Tone had sought to establish, and to justify the use of violence against the State, and at a time when it was never more necessary for Irishmen to stand shoulder to shoulder in disciplined comradeship in order to defend the national territory which has been liberated, and to hold it as an earnest of the reunion of all our territory."

"There is no reference in it to topical subjects—neutrality, the war, the Constitution or the Government," Mr. LARKIN said. "Does the Minister suggest that in this age and day even an expression of opinion on national topics should be censored?" Failing to get a satisfactory reply, he said he would raise the matter on the adjournment.

When Mr. LARKIN re-opened the matter before the House rose he submitted that there was not one item in the whole of the publication that the Minister could publicly point to as a danger to any issues at the moment. The position appeared to be that the Minister was not in a position to show where censorship should be applied, and he fell back on the power of suppression. The present instance alone was sufficient to cast suspicion on the whole utilisation of the office of censorship.

Remarking that the innocence of Mr. Larkin was amazing, the MINISTER said that it seemed as if that clever young man wanted to round up the elements of a dangerous movement in the country and utilise them as a shield to break down the defences which the State had thought fit to erect against its enemies, internal and external. Mr. Larkin was not so innocent as not to know that the whole tenour of the annual was to the effect that no Government had a right to exist against the wishes of some individuals who wanted to use force to overthrow it.

Irish Help For War Distress Victims Abroad

THE Government has decided to assist the Irish Red Cross Society by a grant of £100,000 for the alleviation of suffering in India, and a loan of a similar amount for the relief of distress in Europe.

Making the announcement in the Dail yesterday, when he introduced a vote for the purpose, Mr. de Valera said that we ought to be thankful to God for saving us the miseries which the war brought to a number of other nations, and he felt sure that the citizens would show their gratitude by providing to such an extent as possible the finances to relieve suffering humanity in every part of the world.

The vote was unanimously passed.

In consequence of a telegram of appeal from the Mayor of Calcutta to Mr. de Valera, the sum voted in respect of Indian relief will be sent immediately to the Indian Red Cross by the Irish Red Cross. The loan will be held to the credit of Irish Red Cross funds in order to enable the organisation to meet further possible urgent appeals from other countries.

It was disclosed by Mr. de Valera that the Irish organisation is about to launch an appeal for funds in the hope of raising half a million pounds for relief work generally, and he appealed for support for the campaign, even, as he said, to the extent of making sacrifices. "No one," he added, should incline to the view that because the Government had stepped in to assist the Red Cross in an emergency that personal responsibility for contributing was removed.

"I am asking the Irish people, who have been helped in their hour of necessity by other countries, to quickly subscribe the half-million pounds that is being sought," he said. "The mites of the people are infinitely more valuable than any assistance a Government could render."

The Taoiseach said that the Irish Red Cross seemed to have been suffering from a serious want of publicity, and comparatively few people were aware that the organisation had been instrumental in affording relief through the International Red Cross to the people of China, Greece, Finland, earthquake sufferers in Turkey, refugees in a number of countries, and French, Polish, Italian, Yugo-Slav and German prisoners of war, as well as helping Irish people in the Far East.

At the end of this war, he said, there would be an appalling situation facing all the countries of Europe, and he thought that the Red Cross here should be in a position in which they would be able to give substantial aid.

Mr. W. COSGRAVE (F.G.) said that he had not gathered from the Taoiseach's statement whether there had been any application from the Irish Red Cross Society for this sum of money. He did not think the money should be given without such application. The Red Cross in other countries was separate from the Government, and he did not know whether there was to be a departure from that policy here.

Mr. W. NORTON (Lab.) said that it was with feelings of horror and profound regret that the people of this nation had learned of the catastrophe which had overwhelmed India.

Mr. J. LARKIN (Labour) said that, if anything were needed to justify the humanitarian feelings of our people, it was the action of the Taoiseach in introducing that vote. His only complaint was that this help was too long delayed.

Mr. DILLON (Independent), in supporting the vote, said that he thought that if an organisation like the Irish Red Cross was given a substantial sum of money they should be in a position to satisfy the community that the work undertaken was done with the maximum efficiency. He was bound to say that his information was that the Red Cross had dwindled away in many rural areas, and he thought they ought to be clear in their minds as to where the future of that society lay.

The Chairman of the Central Council of the Red Cross, Mr. Justice Conor Maguire, said last night that the society had been considering for several months past the question of post-war relief for Europe. They had not had time to make a complete survey of the position, but they had gathered a good deal of information about food scarcity in different countries, and about the presence, or possibility, of famine conditions in other countries. There were difficulties in the way of doing very much at present.

Now that they knew they had this large sum to their credit it would give them every encouragement to continue with their plans. They hoped to have available in a few days copies of a brochure which would give the public some idea of the present position of the Irish Red Cross Society in this matter.

Push By Eighth Army

LASHED by snow driving down the Apennine defiles, the Eighth Army is endeavouring to split the German front with a powerful thrust up the main road north of Isernia, in central Italy.

General Montgomery's left wing—advancing five miles to seize the blazing ruins of Rionero—has driven a deep salient into the mid-Italian front. The British troops are now advancing up the main central Italy road, which by-passes Rome.

Spearheads are already less than 30 miles from the Rome-Percara motorway—the lateral lifeline behind the German front. South-west of the British advance Fifth Army units are clearing German troops from heights covering the inland road to Rome. German resistance is still strong on the Fifth Army front.

South-west of Mignano the Americans have developed a successful attack, clearing the Germans from slopes, from where they had been firing on Allied positions.

The R.A.F. on Wednesday night made a heavy attack on the French frontier town and railway centre of Modane, near the entrance to the Mont Cenis tunnel. The tunnel—7½ miles long—is the most important rail link available for war traffic between France and Italy. It had been blocked by the R.A.F.'s previous night attack on September 16th.

Railway targets were also attacked at Recco, 15 miles east of Genoa, and Bolzano, southern exit of the Brenner Pass.

Mosquitos attacked objectives in Western Germany and mines were laid in German waters.—(Reuter.)

Criticisms of Speech

Describing Mr. Dillon's speech as "mischievous and misleading," Mr. W. DAVIN (Labour) observed that a similar speech by Mr. Dillon on a previous occasion had been circulated by his friends in the United States for the purpose of misleading the people there regarding the Irish people's attitude. He said that Mr. Dillon had supported neutrality at the outset, and had been a member of the Defence Council, implementing the policy of neutrality.

When Mr. Dillon sought to intervene, Mr. DAVIN declared: "I will not give way after such an anti-Irish speech. It is bound to cause mischief, even among the Irish in America, and it is a most regrettable thing that a cultured man like him should deliver such an oration.

"Not merely had the Irish Government protested against the bombing incidents, but had actually claimed damages, and liability had been admitted. It was a terrible thing to insinuate that, although the Government made a protest against the Belfast bombing, in effect the Government said it served them damn well right. That was an entire misrepresentation. I protest as strongly as I can against a dirty, anti-Irish speech."

Mr. W. NORTON (Labour) described Mr. Dillon as "crying in the wilderness." The three parties, he said, had pursued a cautious, prudent policy of neutrality in the defence conference. Outside the countries originally involved in the war, no neutral State had taken part in hostilities until their territory was invaded, and he thought that all parties should reaffirm their adherence to neutrality.

If Mr. Dillon would not give the nation the benefit of his talents in advocating neutrality, then he ought to shut his mouth and stop a deliberate effort to sabotage external policy.

Dr. T. F. O'HIGGINS (F.G.), "speaking in the interests of fair play," protested emphatically against "vicious attacks" made on Deputy Dillon, who stood alone in that House because he expressed views not in conformity with the views of any of the parties. There was no justification for any deputy getting up to misrepresent Mr. Dillon's statement as malicious sabotage. The statement of Mr. Dillon was to the effect that Ireland could be neutral and still friendly with old friends and sympathetic with their struggles.

Mr. W. COSGRAVE (F.G.) said the decision to be neutral had been taken in a solemn hour, and in the four intervening years the Government had had little cause to complain of the way in which they had been treated—all parties had a patriotic concept of their duty. It might have been that the division of the country had constrained them to take that step in the belief that while the boundary remained no other policy could get unanimous support.

It might be, perhaps, that they should focus attention on that, not for the purpose of antagonising opinion inside or outside, but merely to state the self-evident fact that while the boundary remained it was politically impossible for Ireland to approach the consideration of national affairs with an unbiased mind.

There was no reason why Deputy Dillon's speech should not have been listened to in silence.

Progress was reported, and the House adjourned till Tuesday next.

"The present ration of soap is completely inadequate," Mr. S. Lemass, Minister for Supplies, confessed in the Dail yesterday, adding: "It is only with difficulty it can be maintained."

Final Acceptances for Leopardstown 'Chase

BY OUR RACING CORRESPONDENT

THERE has been nothing of a startling nature attached to the final acceptances for the £1,000 Leopardstown 'Chase (2¼m.) on Saturday week, and on Wednesday last forfeit was paid for only seven. Thus, of the original entry of 50, no fewer than 31 remain in, the other 12 having been taken out on October 27th.

The batch taken out on Wednesday comprised Mr. A. Watson's Desert Star, Lord Queenborough's Sir Sen, Miss D. Paget's Capital Star, Mr. J. A. Mangan's Swindon Glory, Mr. W. J. Kelly's Slieve Dubh, Mrs. G. A. Harris's Dan Kelly and Mrs. L. Hyde's Lovely Cottage. Thus, it can be seen that all the fancied candidates hold their ground, and there has not been any appreciable variation of the odds in the ante-post betting lists in the last couple of days.

Conflicting rumours are rife concerning the well-being of a couple of the candidates, and I understand that in one case definite decision will not be made until after the Naas meeting to-morrow.

NAAS NOVEMBER HANDICAP

There has been considerable whittling down of the field for the Naas November Handicap, and 15 of the 38 were taken out on Wednesday. The non-acceptors are Fair Gem, Bridget, Golspie, Banavie, Scots Guard, Wykehamist, Mill Boy, Bannerman, Commissioner, Airy Prince Our Pyjamas, Ryskid, Arts Ball, Subtle Serpent and Smuts. There is ample material for an excellent race in the 23 left in, and wagering is certain to be on a keen scale, with such as Sammy's Rock, Astrometer, Ballynure and Aughamore all finding ready support.

CAPT. C. HARTY'S AGENCY

Captain Cyril Harty, who, for several years, was a member of the famous Irish military jumping team, and is now a successful racehorse trainer, is director of the newly-formed Overseas Bloodstock Agency, St. Laurence Manor, Chapelizod, Dublin. Captain Harty has for some time past been closely identified with the purchase and export of Irish bloodstock to several countries.

Hockey League Programme

POSITIONS are changing week after week at the head of the Senior Hockey League table, and at the moment Three Rock Rovers and Y.M.C.A. are joint leaders. This state of affairs will probably remain unchanged for another week, as these two ought to be successful to-morrow, Rovers, who alone are unbeaten, have the harder job in travelling to Portrane, last season's winners of this competition. After a bad start, the holders are showing a definite improvement, but the Rovers' attack may prove a shade too fast for them. Corinthians have revived in great style from last season, a tightening-up in defence having made a big difference; but their attack is still weak, so Y.M.C.A., holding a big advantage there, should win at Claremont road.

Heavily defeated by Y.M.C.A. last Saturday, Pembroke Wanderers, a point behind the leaders, will have their hands full against Railway Union at Park avenue, but seem to be slightly stronger all round.

Unless their forwards allow far more ability in putting the ball into the net, Dublin University will hardly beat St. James's Gate at Londonbridge road. The two teams at the Mardyke, Dolkey and Avoca, meet at Stradbrook, and there is little to choose between them.

STOMACH ACID?

DON'T DELAY! A COUPLE OF RENNIES AND YOU'RE O.K.!

"I have suffered with acid stomach on and off for years, and have tried so-called stomach remedies till I was fed up...."

"My son bought me a packet of Rennies and I had instant relief...."

"I would never go out now without a packet of Rennies in my pocket. They do cure that burning feeling in the stomach, which makes you feel so low and heavy."

"I would never go out now without a packet in my pocket," says Mrs. J. C.

YOU'LL never wage a losing battle with acid indigestion if you carry Rennies around in your pocket. You know how acidity gets you — all of a sudden — like a Commando raid. But Rennies deal with that kind of indigestion on the spot.

No matter where you are, at the first sign of queasiness pop a pleasant-tasting Rennie into your mouth and suck it like a sweet. Then another. Rennies are separately wrapped so you carry them loose in your pocket or handbag. When indigestion strikes at you, you strike back then and there.

It only takes a couple of minutes for the 15 ingredients in Rennies to neutralize excess acid. Then pain, nausea, flatulence beat the quick-est retreat ever. You feel like a two-year-old with an appetite like a Master Mariner.

1,198 doctors recommend Rennies to their patients. Never be caught out with indigestion. Get Rennies at your chemist's today and carry a few loose wherever you go. 25 for 7d., 100 for 2/-.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

without Calomel—and you'll jump out of bed in the morning full of vim and vigour. The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxative helps a little, but a mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes these good old Carters Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carters Little Liver Pills. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 1/3 and 3/-

Rugby Games Have A Special Interest

WITH the selection of the Leinster team to meet Ulster at Lansdowne road to-morrow week in view, the club matches in Dublin to-morrow will arouse enhanced interest. The big attraction of the day will be at Lansdowne road, where Lansdowne are at home to Trinity. Despite his good play in the centre at Galway last week-end, N. Burke is chosen in his usual position on the wing for Lansdowne, with J. Dawson as his partner in the centre. Trinity, the heaviest-scoring team in Leinster so far, will be without H. de Lacy at scrum-half, R. Charles being the substitute. With both teams having plenty of pace on the wings, there ought to be any amount of bright, open play in this game.

Clontarf and University College seem to be evenly matched, and there is certain to be a keen struggle between two strong packs at Castle avenue, but the home team have probably a shade more penetration behind the scrum. On the opening Saturday of the season St. Mary's beat Wanderers 3-3 at Lansdowne road; to-morrow they play the return game at Kimmage Grove, and Wanderers may reverse that result on this occasion, as St. Mary's have fallen away to some degree after their successful start.

Bective Rangers, with that good win, forward, Jack Guiney, out for the first time this season, should prove too strong for the disappointing Old Wesley team at Donnybrook, but Old Belvedere, without a win to their credit so far, and five defeats in six matches, may possibly open their account to-morrow at Williamstown. Their opponents, Blackrock College, are a very uncertain quantity at present, having been badly hit by injuries. Palmerston entertain Malone, one of the best Ulster sides, at Clonskeagh, and Curragh command have transferred their home fixture with Monkstown to Sydney Parade.

ROVERS' CHANCE IN SHIELD

THE victories of Shamrock Rovers, Limerick and Drumcondra last week-end made the Shield table most interesting reading. Only two series of games remain to be decided, and the position now is that Rovers, with eight points, lead by one from Drumcondra, with Limerick and Shelbourne bracketed with six. Even Dundalk, with five, could be there or thereabouts at the finish a week hence, but that is unlikely.

It is scarcely possible that St. James's Gate, without a point to their credit out of five games, will spring a surprise on Drumcondra at Tolka Park on Sunday. Drumcondra were not slow to recover from their remarkable experience at Milltown; that was proved last Saturday at Shelbourne Park, where the home team were badly outplayed in meeting their first defeat.

Still, Shelbourne could continue to worry the two top teams in the table. A win to-morrow at Ringsend against Dundalk would, for the time being, place them on a level terms with the Rovers. For that game the Dundalk directors have resolved on rather sweeping changes. Leathem and Lavery have been left out, and the half-back line in front of O'Neill and Crawley will be Parkin, Donnelly and Hearty. Graham, formerly of Cliftonville, is being tried on the inside right in Barlowe, and McCartney's partner on the left will be Grice.

These alterations should give an added interest to what is, for both clubs, an important game.

Since their defeat by Shelbourne in the opening match in the Shield, the Rovers have been carrying all before them, and on Sunday at Milltown they showed strength in their position at the expense of Limerick. To do so, however, they will have to improve on their display of last Sunday against the Gate.

Bohemians have a difficult cup tie match with Cork United, but it is of club interest only.

DECISION IN NORTHERN DISPUTE

Linfield and Celtic were ordered by the Emergency Committee of the Northern Ireland Regional League last night to fulfil all their regular fixtures as from to-morrow. For failure to play their matches last Saturday they were each fined £10, the fines to be paid by November 28th.

First Production in Ireland

IT seems strange that those who have selected so many Continental plays for production in Dublin should have missed "The Good Hope," by Herman Heijermans. It is a grand play which adapts itself easily through Irish acting, and comes very close to us in its subject and its feeling. Long ago—it is over forty years old—it could have been made to serve the Abbey Players, and to help also as a model for our playwrights.

It has been left to the Pilgrim Players to show it to us for the first time this week in their wholly-excellent production at the Peacock Theatre. They do a very fine piece of work with it, and its simple and moving story comes to rich life through the delicately-restrained acting of a perfectly chosen cast, in which everyone is of importance, without any effort that is apparent. Each Pilgrim Player becomes the living counterpart of each character out of the fishing village on the coast of the North Sea, which is its scene. There is a wonderful intimacy about these characters, for Heijermans makes us feel at home with his people, makes us pass with them gently into their joys and sorrows, and then gives, with a crash of his power, all the pity and terror of the sea in his magnificent third act. "The Good Hope" fails a little, perhaps, from full irony in the last act, but that earlier scene, where the women sit around waiting, while we know that the fishing smack is being lost in the storm, is great drama.

This was the scene, too, which was played so well by Peggy Hayes, Alice McLean, Moira Sheridan, Cathleen Bradshaw, Josephine Healy and Maura Lane. It would be hard to say, indeed, whether it was the men or the women in the cast who did most to make this production outstanding amongst amateur efforts of the season, for Kenneth Kenny, Alex. Dignam, Donald MacLean, Harry Edmonds, Martin Gale and Joseph Dalton were six others who were all excellent in most convincing characterisation.

The production was by James J. Henry.

Jury's Question Made Trial Abortive

BECAUSE the jury asked a question from which the inference was drawn that they knew that money had been lodged in Court with the defence in the action of James Sweeney, merchant, Ahascragh, Co. Galway, against Superintendent William O'Halloran, Ballinasloe, and other members of the Civic Guard and two officials of the Department of Supplies, Messrs. Aloysius McNally and Michael T. O'Brien, the President of the High Court discharged them yesterday.

In the action, which had been at hearing for two days and a half, Mr. Sweeney claimed damages for trespass, and the seizure of account books from his premises; and the defence was that the books had been taken under an Emergency Powers Order.

After an absence of half an hour the jury came into Court with a slip of paper which was passed to the President.

Having read it, the President told counsel that the jury wished to ask: "Re lodgment of sum in court, will the payment of costs be in any way affected by the amount of damages awarded by the jury to the plaintiff?"

Mr. McGonigal, S.C., for the defendants, asked the President to discharge the jury and to direct a new trial.

The foreman of the jury stated that it was only a surmise on their part that money had been lodged in Court. Another juror said that he thought that it was the general rule that money was lodged in Court.

The President said that, in the circumstances, the only course for him was to discharge the jury.

Accordingly, the jury were discharged, and the President directed that a new trial of the action should not take place during the present sittings.

Motor Crash Damages Claim

A High Court jury yesterday assessed damages at £396 in favour of Daniel Leahy, and one of £350 in favour of Michael Noonan, both members of the Civic Guard at Tralee, and at £250 in favour of Patrick Foley, Killeen, Oakpark, Tralee, in their actions against the Minister for Finance for damages for injuries suffered when a State-owned motor car in which they were driving struck a tree at Mount Earl Cross, Adare, County Limerick, on October 31st last.

As Mr. Justice Martin Maguire held that the Guards were in common employment with the driver of the car, he gave judgment for the Minister in their actions, but in the case of Foley, who was a civilian, he gave judgment for him, with costs in every case.

Earl of Kenmare's Estate

At Mallow Circuit Court on Tuesday, Judge O'Connor granted the application of the trustees of the late Sixth Earl of Kenmare (better known as Viscount Castlerosse) to amend a decree of his court dated February 11th, 1941, by substituting for the name of the Fifth Earl the names of the trustees of the Sixth Earl, Leonard Bevin and Cyril Pinder, chartered accountants, of 64 High street, Epsom, Surrey.

Counsel moved on the affidavit of Mr. William A. Roulston, Killarney, estate manager for the Fifth and Sixth Earls, on probate of the will of the Fifth Earl, and on a voluntary settlement of the Sixth Earl, dated November 19th, 1942, appointing trustees, and settling his Irish estate on his children, whom, failing, on his younger brother, Major the Hon. Gerald Robert Edmund Browne.

Counsel did not ask for costs. Mr. Goin O'Mahoney (instructed by Mr. Michael Casey, Killarney), appeared for Lord Kenmare's trustees; Mr. P. J. Fleming (instructed by Mr. David Fleming, Charleville), appeared for Mr. and Miss Fleere.

KEEN COMPETITION AT DUBLIN AUCTION

Nearly 200 people attended the sale at Battersby's auction rooms yesterday, when property about 25 Upr. Pembroke street, a block of modern, up-to-date flats, producing a net income of close on £2,000 per annum, was offered. The bidding started at £15,000, and was followed by bids until the figure of £21,500 was reached, and as no further advance could be got, the property was withdrawn at this figure, but Mr. Judd announced that private bids would be considered after the auction, and an early sale is expected. The bungalow residence, 4 Beaumont Gardens, Blackrock, was sold at a satisfactory figure, but the Northlands Hotel at Beltystown did not reach the reserve price.

Midnight Incident at Roebuck Castle

Edward McCann (29), Monkstown road, motor mechanic, who was found guilty of the attempted larceny of a motor tyre and tube, and of obstructing and assaulting members of the Civic Guard was put back. The evidence showed that during the auction at Roebuck Castle McCann was surprised by two Guards while in the yard of the castle at midnight on September 25th last. A chase followed, two shots being fired over McCann's head after he had been twice called on to halt. Before he was finally taken McCann threw a glass frame which struck Guard Joseph Bracken on the legs.

Help from Ireland

Yesterday Mr. de Valera introduced a vote of £200,000, which was passed unanimously, for the relief of distress in India and on the Continent of Europe. Of this sum, which will be administered by the Irish Red Cross, £100,000 is designed as an immediate gift to alleviate the consequences of the terrible famine in India. The remaining half will be credited to the Irish Red Cross, and will form a fund, on which it may draw in order to meet immediate appeals from European countries. While £200,000 is no small sum of money, according to Irish standards, it is only a drop in the bucket of the world's immediate and future needs; and the Taoiseach adds a reminder that the vote of Dail Eireann is not intended to take the place of private contributions to the funds of the Red Cross. That organisation is making a "drive" to secure half a million pounds for the relief of distress. Such an amount of money will not be subscribed in a day or two; and the present loan is designed purely as a fund from which urgent demands may be met. There will not be many hostile critics of the Exchequer's latest "extravagance." Even the few people—such exist always and everywhere — who argue that charity begins at home must admit that, in the awful circumstances of to-day, it does not end there. Millions of people on the Continent are crushed under the heel of war. The ordinary work of food production has been suspended in thousands of square miles of fertile territory, and the once huge imports of food from over the seas arrive no longer. Every report from India tells a tale of suffering that must touch the hardest heart. There are, it is true, hungry people in Ireland, but there are few who die of starvation; elsewhere there are myriads. Our country has much for which it may be grateful. It has been spared the horror of becoming a battlefield; its loss of life from aerial bombing is probably less than that of any other European neutral; it has been deprived, indeed, of many of the luxuries of existence, but its supply of the necessities, though diminished, never yet has declined to the point of real danger. In a sense, therefore, the Dail's modest contribution of £200,000 for the assistance of less fortunate nations may be regarded as a thank-offering. We hope, too, with Mr. de Valera and other speakers to yesterday's debate, that it can be considered merely as a "token" payment. For four years Ireland has been outside the main stream of history; with the return of peace, she must be prepared once again to play her part in world affairs. There is not much, perhaps, that a nation of three million people can do in the tremendous tasks of reorganisation that the coming years will bring, but, at least, our country can contribute its mite. On that account, we hope that the Red Cross's appeal will enjoy an eager response.

The Use of the Film

In the foyer of a large Dublin cinema there hangs a poster which shows a small boy, tense in his seat, gazing with fascinated eyes at the places and deeds unfolded on the screen before him. The title is "The Birth of Ambition." The artist's conception is romantic enough, and probably it has stirred cynical amusement in many patrons—not only district justices. Ambition, when it is the ambition merely to handle a six-gun or to play a saxophone—so runs the general thought—is just as well not born at all. Yet it must be understood, sooner or later, that the film is not the enemy of education, but the most powerful instrument ever contrived for it to wield. The attraction of the film cannot be denied. It has built itself into our society, and we have no more hope of abolishing it than we have of abolishing the internal combustion engine. Like any other great invention, it is an evil only as long as we misunderstand how to use it. In the classroom, under the direction of a capable teacher, the film can impart more knowledge than a score of books. Everybody remembers how much more vivid were, for instance, his geography classes, when the teacher made free use of diagrams, maps and pictures. Modern cartoon technique can make diagrams live—Mr. Walt Disney, for example, is engaged in making cartoons to teach American recruits the principles of electricity; short documentary films can bring foreign countries, industry, farm and workshop into the classroom. After the war, we may expect to see a great development in the business of renting 16 mm. films for use in school projectors. The Department of Education has here the opportunity for an enterprising and profitable action. Why should it not undertake to assist schools in the purchase of projecting equipment, by offering interest-free loans repayable in small instalments, and establish its own library of 16 mm. films for circulation to all schools able to make use of them? Yet it seems improbable that the Department will be able to break down the general Government belief that films are an unfortunate intrusion on our Celtic retirement, and must be treated as such. Magistrates, clergy, teachers, laymen of every creed, bemoan the evil influence of the cinema on the young—the "Los Angelicisation" of our cities and small towns; but the only remedy that they can suggest is a censorship, Victorian at once in its enthronement of prudishness and its indifference to taste. Good films—often with the most moral of underlying motives—are stopped or "slashed" because of some trifling "immoralities," while no effort is made to check the nauseous stream of cheap American "musicals." The proper thing, however, if we do not like the films of other nations, is to produce films of our own. A substantial Government subsidy could set the industry on its feet, and at the same time ensure that the pictures produced were in conformity with the national ideal of the moment; an intelligent band of directors—they are available—would see that the films were artistically satisfying. That the project would pay its way is more than probable, if the industry were encouraged to concentrate on quality. As somebody said not long ago, a good film is a good film anywhere.

OBITUARY

CANON J. O. MURRAY.

The Rev. Canon John Oswald Murray, D.D., whose death occurred in October, at Winnipeg, Canada, in his 77th year, was a son of the late Dean of Ballymena. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he gained a First Class Scholarship and the Vice-Chancellor's Gold Medal in 1889; took his Divinity Testimonium in 1896, and was ordained in the following year.

He was curate of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London, until 1902, and acted as temporary Chaplain to the Forces in the 1914-'18 war. Having held a curacy in Co. Meath for some years, he went to Winnipeg as Canon of St. John's Cathedral and Professor of Theology at St. John's College.

REV. H. P. BRADY, P.P.

The death occurred yesterday of the Rev. Hugh P. Brady, P.P., at the Parochial House, Cootehill, Co. Cavan. Aged seventy years, he was a native of Laragh, Co. Cavan. He ministered as Curate in Carrigallen, Co. Leitrim, and Cavan Town. He built a new church in Cootehill about twelve years ago.

ST. MATTHIAS'S CHURCH

St. Matthias's Church, which stands on ground formerly included within the boundaries of St. Peter's Parish, was opened for public worship on November 19th, one hundred years ago, the foundation stone having been laid by Archbishop Whately on St. Matthias's Day, February 24th, 1842. The first incumbent of the parish was the Rev. M. F. Day, afterwards Bishop of Cashel, who held office until 1867, and preached at the celebration of the Jubilee in 1893. Services of Thanksgiving, marking the centenary, will be held on Sunday, when the preacher at the 11.30 Service will be the Lord Primate, and at 7.15 the Archbishop of Dublin.

LESS WASTE-PAPER COLLECTED

The waste-paper merchants are seeking an increase in the price of waste-paper allowed them by the mills. In the meantime, Waste-paper Ltd., which organises the house-to-house collection in Dublin and district, in an effort to reduce expenses, has cut the number of collecting teams from 20 to 10, and has also given up some of its surburban depôts. Even with these cuts, the average collection of each team has fallen to about ten cwt. per week, as compared with 15 cwt. about a year ago.

WEDDING

Bamber—Herald.—The wedding took place at Knockbreda Parish Church, Belfast, of Mr. James Bamber, LL.B., solicitor, of Ballymena, a well-known prize-winner in jumping competitions at the R.D.S., shows and a former member of the T.C.D. athletic team, to Sarah Herald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herald, Rosetta Park, Belfast. The Rev. Canon Louis Crooks, Rector, conducted the service. The best man was Major William Bamber, brother of the bridegroom, and the bridesmaid was Miss Beatrice McFadden. A reception, given by the bride's parents, was held afterwards at the Grand Central Hotel.

£1,700 for Postman's Family.—The Minister for Finance had agreed to pay Mrs. Josephine Fagan, Clowmmore, Mullingar, £1,700 and costs, in settlement of her action against him for damages for the death of her husband, Peter, a postman, who was struck by a State-owned motor-lorry on February 3rd last, Mr. Michael J. Ryan, S.C., told the President of the High Court yesterday. The President apportioned £1,050 of the money to Mrs. Fagan, and the balance amongst her seven children.

CRUISKEEN LAWN

By Myles na gCopaleen

I'LL tell you a good wan.
Indeed?
I'll give you a laugh.
How very welcome.
The brother's studyin the French. The brother has the whole digs in a right state and the nerves of half of the crowd up there is broke down.
How truly characteristic of your relative.
The brother comes down to breakfast there about a fortnight back, ten minutes late. And I'll tell you a good wan. What be all the powers had the brother up here at the neck
I do not know.
A bow tie begob.
I see.
A bow tie with spots on it. Well luckit. I nearly passed out. I didn't know where to look when I seen the bow tie. You couldn't . . . . say anythin, you know. The brother wouldn't like that. The brother takes a very poor view of personal remarks. Did you not know that? Shure that's well-known.
I did not know that.
Well anyway the crowd tries to pretend to be goin on with the breakfast and pay no attention to your man but of course there wasn't wan there but was shook in the nerves be the appearance of the brother. Gob now the atmosphere was fierce. What does your man do? Does he sit down and start eatin?
I should be astonished to learn that he did.
Not at all man, over with him to the mantelpiece and starts workin and pokin and foosterin at the clock. he was squintin and peerin and peepin there for five minutes and then he comes along and starts lightin matches to see better, manipulatin and cavortin there for further orders, you'd swear he was searching for the hall-mark on it. He was openin the glass . . . . and shuttin it . . . . and openin it . . . . and slammin it shut again—you'd need the nerves of an iron man to sit there and swally the grub. It was fierce.
I have no doubt.
There we were the whole crowd of us sittin waitin for the blow to fall, the landlady changin colour like something you'd see in a circus. The only man that wasn't sweatin there was meself. Bar meself, the nerves of the crowd was in flitters.
Pray proceed to the dénouement.
At last begob the blow fell. Without turnin round at all, the brother speaks in a very queer voice. I don't see any Hair Dev, says he. I don't see any Hair Dev. Well luckit. Do you know what it is?
What is it?
The crowd nearly passed out. The poor ould landlady—there was tears in her eyes. What's that, says she. But the brother doesn't pretend to hear, sits down very cross-lookin and starts swallyin tea, you could see the bow tie waggin every time your man swallied a mouthful. There wasn't another thing said that fine morning.
I see.
Next thing off with the poor land. lady down town to Moore Street, tried every shop in the street lookin for the brother's fancy feed but it was no use, she didn't know whether it was sold loose or in a bag or in a tin. The nearest French stuff she could get was the French beans. So what does she do only have a feed of them things laid out for the brother's breakfast next mornin. What's this, says the brother. Them's French garden vegetables, says the landlady. The land of France, says the brother, never seen them things.
That is what one would call "a quare one."
Thing's is gone from bad to worse. The brother now has a jug of Hair Dev bought be himself above in the bedroom. Breakfast in bed and drinkin tay out of a glass! And the bow tie never offa the neck!
And one assumes that is only a beginning.
The brother says he doesn't know why he lives in this country at all. Takes a very poor view. Here's me bus! Cheers!
Cheers!

R.D.S. GENERAL MEETING

A tribute ought to be paid to the Royal Dublin Society for the way they had provided so much entertainment in these difficult times, said Mr. Ralph Hope, at a stated general meeting of the Society, held at Ballsbridge yesterday.

Professor A. W. Conway, F.R.S., President of the Royal Dublin Society, was in the chair.

The meeting was held to receive nominations for honorary officers, members of council and of standing committees.

The outgoing members being eligible for re-election, the only additional names submitted were those put forward by the committees, in accordance with the bye-laws.

New Peace Commissioner.—Mr. J. A. O'Brien, Fellow of the Institute of Opticians, 36 Ramleh Park, Milltown, and 7 Trinity street, Dublin, has been appointed a Peace Commissioner.

ARMISTICE DAY IN IRELAND

ABOUT 1,000 Irish ex-Service men attended the Remembrance Day ceremony in the Irish National War Memorial, Islandbridge, yesterday, for the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Great War Armistice in 1918. In addition, between 1,000 and 1,500 spectators were present.

Medals and decorations were worn, and ex-Service men paraded in Islandbridge Park and marched into the Memorial Garden. Mr. A. P. Connolly, Chairman, British Legion in Ireland, was in charge of the parade. The ceremony was similar to that of previous years, and began with the playing of the Dead March, followed by the sounding of the Last Post. After the two minutes' silence had been observed, the Reveille was sounded and a lament played, during which wreaths were laid on the Cross of Remembrance. After the ceremony head-dress was removed, and the contingents marched past the Cross and out of the Memorial Park to disperse individually.

PRESENTATION AT BRAY

The Rev. Chancellor G. Digby Scott, M.A., was presented on Wednesday night with a cheque, album and wireless set on the occasion of his retirement at the end of fifty years' service in Bray. The parishioners also presented a wristlet watch and a bouquet to Mrs. Scott as a token of their affection for her.

The presentation, which was held in Bray Parochial Hall, was made by the Archbishop of Dublin, who recalled the long years of service given by Chancellor Scott and Chancellor Scott's father, Archdeacon Scott. There was no man in the diocese for whom the clergy had deeper respect.

Returning thanks, Chancellor Scott said that he always had been given an enormous amount of help from the Select Vestry and Churchwardens.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET ST., LONDON,
THURSDAY NIGHT.

A NEW series of Saturday afternoon symphony concerts for children is shortly to start in London. Each item in the concert will be preceded by a short talk on the work, and also with quotations from the principal themes. Among the works which will be played are those set for this year's Cambridge School Certificate Examination — Handel's "Messiah," Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Beethoven's Egmont Overture, and Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream Overture. Leading soloists are to give their services at the concerts, which, in all respects, will be of the same standard as those intended for adults. Children's concerts were a most attractive feature of pre-war London life, and it is only recently that they have been re-started.

American Cattle

Interest in United States live-stock is widespread in this country, for Great Britain largely provided the foundation of the different breeds. The official delegation of British farmers, which has now returned from North America, reports that among the dairy breeds the Holstein is pre-eminent, but there are large herds of Jerseys and Guernseys in all the dairying districts, very often coupled with the Holstein. The brown Swiss, a thickset, dual purpose, has some prominence, and the Ayrshire is seen in considerable numbers, mainly in the more Northern States. Sheep are mostly of the Down breeds, with Rambouillets and Merinos also in evidence. In beef cattle the uniform excellence of the huge Hereford numbers is remarkable, but there are also very fine herds of shorthorns and Aberdeen-Angus. Among horses, the Percheron is the favourite.

Beer and Whisky Prices

Lord Woolton is considering a protest from the Edinburgh Trades and Labour Council asserting that certain publicans are indulging in a "get rich quick" campaign by charging 1s. to 1s. 4d. a pint for beer and 2s. 8d. to 3s. 6d. a glass for whisky. The Council has also submitted evidence that on Sundays as much as 1s. 6d. a pint for beer and 5s. to 6s. a glass for whisky is sometimes charged. They allege that there are, nowadays, no regular visits of inspectors to test quality or strength, as in pre-war days. The prices of many services in London have gone to new heights in recent months through Americans paying higher prices. West-End shoeblacks now ask 1s. for a shoe-shine, and may average 12 to 16 an hour.

Property-owners' Problems

The National Federation of Property Owners, of which Lord Cheaham is president, is conducting a vigorous campaign against the conclusions of the Uthwatt report, which the Federation claims, is based on the erroneous assumptions that all development by public bodies is good; all development by individuals is bad, and that all betterment is created by the State and accrues to individuals. "Experience has shown that betterment is more often created by the enterprise of owners than by the State or local authorities," states the Federation, "and that it more often accrues to the State in the form of higher rateable values and Schedule A tax upon property than to the individual whose enterprise created it." In the Housing Act, 1935, the Federation was able to ensure the abolition of the reduction factor under which property was confiscated at less than site value, and also established the right of an owner to receive a schedule of defects alleged against his property prior to a clearance inquiry. It has no sympathy with property speculators, many of whom have been very busy since the outbreak of the war. Recently, however, the Government empowered local bodies to take over property at 1939 prices.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Hamilton, a Poet

A correspondent, J.R.H., writes: So much has been written about quaternions and the discoverer's other scientific attainments that we might be led to believe that William Rowan Hamilton's mind was one almost inhuman, a sort of meticulous calculating machine; but there were other, more generally interesting, aspects of him.

He was always happy in the entertainment of his many literary friends, among whom Felicia Hemans recorded that she, with those congenial to her quiet habits and taste, spent pleasant evenings at Dunsink.

Hamilton's own literary work ought not to be forgotten. While mastering twelve languages and the full mathematical courses at T.C.D., before reaching his sixteenth year, he allowed song to lighten his serious studies. Twice he gained the Vice-Chancellor's prize for English verse, and won the distinction of a "double optime."

D. J. O'Donoghue, in "The Poets of Ireland," includes Hamilton in the ranks of our bards. A number of his poems are in the "Life of Hamilton" (3 vols. 1882-9), by R. P. Graves, and some fine sonnets by him are in Main's, Sharp's and Dyce's collections.

Wordsworth's Verdict

William Sharp, in "Sonnets of this Century," says that, as a poet, Hamilton is distinctly deserving of sincerest admiration, and Wordsworth once remarked that he had known many men of high talents, and several of real genius, but that Coleridge and Sir W. H. Hamilton were the only men to whom he would apply the term wonderful.

Several contributions by Hamilton were printed in the National Magazine and Dublin Literary Gazette (1930-'31). These
